

Commercial Manager

2010-08-15

We are a communications company that wants to take everything you already like about the text-based Online world such as e-mail, Facebook and sponsored links, and make them just as simple and undramatic when it comes voice communication. This could be about making performance-based Print marketing entirely possible, or offering people a safe and secure way to have voice contact with strangers in the online dating world, or sending all your friends a voice mail instead of an impersonal text message. It could even be about offering a smart analysis of which customers who call you—when, where, and how.

We are constantly attracting more customers, and we have even more incredible applications just around the corner. Now we need to find someone who is equally incredible at communicating to the rest of the world what we are already accomplishing in the small town of Uppsala in Northern Europe.

You are a rare mix of someone who loves data analysis as much as creative communication. You will be a part of creating new business areas, so you are not afraid to be provocative in your communication, and you use all available means for achieving the maximum effect. Whether you choose traditional press releases, guerilla marketing, Facebook or Twitter, it's your call from case to case.

If you are already very curious about Freespee and like the applications we are pumping out, it's a good start. If you are also fairly social and down-to-earth you will be extremely happy with us. You think big, but are a good listener and you can prioritize opportunities in order to quickly create measurability.

You regularly read Techcrunch, but think it is even more fun to be visible in media that our customers read, and they are already in 8 countries. Your job, quite simply, is to take Freespee outside Sweden, because we have already taken Sweden.

Experience of working with a freemium business model for both B2B sales and B2C sales is a great advantage.

We can offer unpretentious and friendly colleagues, and projects that often allow you to redraw the map of the way things used to work. You will work closely with the CEO and be a part of the management team. Salary and other terms are negotiable for applicants who believe in themselves and in Freespee.

Location: Uppsala
